The National Student Media Convention (NSMC), organized by College Broadcasters Incorporated (CBI), attracts hundreds of students who work at student media outlets on campuses all around the United States. At this year's event, beyond the dozens of panel discussions and National Student Production Awards, we will be offering a career fair to allow media companies and university graduate programs the opportunity to interact with our student attendees.

Participants Receive:

- Space for a 6-foot table and display Friday and Saturday
- Opportunity for a representative to participate in at least one panel discussion Thursday, Friday or Saturday
- Promotion in the NSMC Convention app
- Recognition during the National Student Production Awards ceremony on Saturday

Participation Fee: $700

The NSMC regularly attracts more than 400 student attendees each year. The last time we met in Seattle, more than 600 people attended. This year, on Friday afternoon, we will hold an informal "meet and greet" where students can approach and communicate with recruiters in a relaxed and more casual atmosphere. During this time, students can schedule formal interviews with media/college representatives that will take place on Saturday morning.
